This ingredients data set describes nutritional information for various ingredients, including the amount of different macronutrients, pigments, and vitamins. Although there are many variables in the data set, I plan to mostly use the category and macronutrients. The data was collected from USDA's Food Composition Database and can be accessed on the CORGIS website.